Dear DuPage County Farm Bureau Members,

These are strange times we are going through right now. Our office has been closed for weeks, many events canceled, schools closed and AITC classroom visits canceled. Working from home and e-learning has become the "new normal." We all are trying to adjust to new schedules and anticipate getting back to business as usual. Now more than ever we need to come together as a strong member-based organization. We need to support each other to stay healthy both physically and mentally. We need to thank our nurses, doctors, farmers, truckers and everyone working on the "front lines" during this pandemic and keep them in our prayers.

As of print time, we are still in a "Shelter in Place" order from Governor Pritzker, with talks of extensions looming around the corner. Our staff has been working remotely and will continue to be available via phone and email for all your Farm Bureau needs. We truly value our members and will continue to follow all CDC guidelines and recommendations. We will be re-evaluating events and programs going forward and if needed they will be cancelled or rescheduled to a later date. Please visit our website dcfb.org or our Facebook page for the most current updates.

We will be going ahead

Meet an AITC Educator: Mary Biernacki

Did you know that the Ag in the Classroom program has 6 educators on our team? Now's your chance to meet these awesome educators and learn a little bit more about what they do.

Ag in the Classroom is a free program that visits DuPage schools to teach the importance of agriculture. The lessons can be adjusted for all age levels and meet learning standards. We would also be happy to be a part of community events that relate to our agricultural literacy program vision and goals.

Total students reached to date:

Most Presented Topic:
Baseball

Teacher Quote about an AITC Visit:

"Ag in the Classroom is helping my students see that farming is a valuable part of most things in this world that we use frequently."

—Winnebago Elementary School,
1st grade

March has been the strangest month we've ever seen! With schools closing on March 17th, many of our lessons have been postponed. Luckily we were very busy during the first half of the month. Top lessons in March included baseball and dairy. Students learned how the items used in baseball start on a farm. They created baseball diagrams showing which items come from plants and which come from animals. During dairy lessons, the students learned how milk gets from a cow to their table and made their own butter.

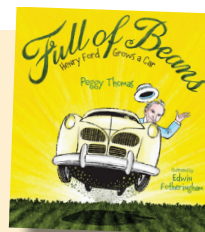

Before working with AITC, Mary Biernacki was an elementary teacher in the Queen Bee District #16 for 35 years, teaching classes for the gifted. During this time, her class attended the annual Ag Expo, and AITC educators regularly visited her classroom. "I saw firsthand what great programs were offered and I wanted to be a part of that team after I retired" Mary says. And that's just what she did! After retiring from teaching in the spring of 2012, Mary was hired as an AITC educator that fall.

It's no surprise that Mary's favorite age group to teach is elementary school! She most enjoys teaching the "Many Hats of a Farmer" lesson, which explains how a farmer has many roles to fill in order to run a successful farm. "The best thing about AITC is that we teach different agriculture topics and continue to build on that knowledge with other lessons. The students are so eager to learn each time I visit" she says.

Mary believes AITC is an important resource to our schools. She has seen the impact of the program both as an elementary teacher and an AITC educator. "Students begin to make connections that what happens on the farm impacts so many parts of their own lives" says Mary. At the end of each lesson, Mary and the students highlight important points that the students can share with their parents. During her next visit, student will often tell her how they taught their parents something new about agriculture. "I'm so fortunate to go into schools to teach such engaging lessons about agriculture."

National Library Week 2020

National Library Week is April 19th-25th! To celebrate, DCFB will donate the children's book Full of Beans; Henry Ford Grows a Car by Peggy Thomas to the libraries in DuPage County. This book was named the American Farm Bureau Federation's "2020 Book of the Year" and shows how Henry Ford incorporated soybeans into every part of his life.

To make one pound of honey, bees in a colony must visit 2 million flowers. A worker honeybee makes about 1/12 of a teaspoon of honey in her lifetime.

Ag Industry Spotlight: Meet Ron Frieders

Ron's family has been farming in Illinois for seven generations. He grew up on the farm working side by side with his father. In high school he took four years of agriculture in addition to machine shop. As a result of the machine shop classes he was offered a great job working for Caterpillar. "After lots of deliberation I decided my heart was truly in farming," Ron says.

In 1970 Ron began farming with his father and mother. Two years later Ron married his grade school sweetheart Denise, who joined their operation working together with the family. They raised Holstein dairy cows, beef cattle, farrow to finish hogs, chickens, hay, oats, wheat, corn and soybeans. Today their son Ryan continues the family tradition with his parents. Over the years, the farm has transitioned over to growing mainly corn and soybeans.

Even after 49 years of farming Ron is still passionate about his work. He says, "I am amazed every spring when the seeds emerge. We plant one bushel of seed corn in the spring and expect to harvest 500 bushels every fall. It's truly remarkable." In all his years of farming Ron has seen some incredible innovations.

The GPS in his computerized equipment insures his rows are straight, allowing him to be able pay more attention to the operation of the equipment. There are no wasteful skips and fertilizer is able to be applied only where it is needed. Advancements in seed technology have increased yields and reduced the use of pesticides. Yet farming is not without its hardships. Inclement weather can destroy a field in a matter of minutes. Additionally, shaky market prices can force farmers to sell their crops at a loss. In the spring and fall the Frieders family work incredibly long hours to make the most of days with favorable weather.

Ron has been a Farm Bureau member all of his adult life. He is currently on the DuPage County board as a Director and Treasurer.

"I am amazed every spring when the seeds emerge. We plant one bushel of seed corn in the spring and expect to harvest 500 bushels every fall. It's truly remarkable."

He believes in the organization's grass roots efforts to promote and educate the public and our legislators about agriculture. In a time when most consumers are several generations removed from the farm, it is important to connect the farmer to the consumer. Ron states, "As farmers, we live on the land and drink the water. We eat our meat and produce. We want to protect the earth with its plants and animals and grow the best quality products to feed the world."

Ham, Cheese & Spinach Puffs

INGREDIENTS

Makes 8:

- 2 sheets puff pastry
- 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1 cup (240ml) warm milk
- 1 pinch of salt
- Freshly cracked pepper, to taste
- Ground nutmeg (optional)
- 1/2 lb (220g) cooked ham, diced
- 2 cups fresh spinach, rinsed and chopped
- 1 cup Swiss cheese, grated

DIRECTIONS

1. Cut the puff pastry sheets into 5-inch squares. Set aside in the refrigerator. Pre-heat oven to 400°F.
2. For the bechamel sauce: Melt butter over medium heat in a saucepan. Add flour and salt; cook, stirring frequently, until the mixture becomes pale golden with a slightly nutty aroma.
3. Pour warm milk in 2 steps, stirring constantly with wooden spoon and whisk until smooth. Cook the mixture, stirring constantly along the bottom of the saucepan, until boiling, about 7 minutes.
4. Reduce heat to low. Simmer until sauce thickens, about 10 minutes. If you still have lumps, use your immersion blender!
5. Stir in spinach and cook for 1 minute. Add ham and cheese and stir well. Set aside.
6. Arrange the puff pastry squares on a baking sheet lined with parchment paper. Dollop 1 or 2 tablespoons of the bechamel mixture, top with grated cheese and close the pockets by folding the corners on top.
7. Make an egg wash using an egg and 1 coffee spoon of cold water. Brush the puff pastry and bake in the oven for 20 minutes, until puffed and golden. Serve immediately.

Planting presses through another unprecedented season

When the wall calendar changed in January, we looked to the 2020 planting season with anxious optimism. Our family, farm friends and even fields needed a fresh start after 2019. Last year's growing season was brutal, from its unprecedented widespread planting delays and trade wars to a muddy harvest that crept into the month of Christmas.

Then entered the novel coronavirus, a biological threat sweeping the globe and turning lifestyles and economies on their heads. We now begin another historic planting season with challenges beyond our control. As a business deemed essential, farm operations continue, and we stand determined to plant corn and soybeans in a timely manner while mindful of social distancing guidelines.

Hours in the tractor cab naturally isolate farm families like ours this time of year. We take comfort in this seasonal confinement and the priority task of planting, a welcome distraction from the troubling news of the world. I most enjoy the swift precision of the season. The planting process takes a fraction of the time of harvest and resembles an incredible work of technological art. The tractor drives itself straight and hands-free. The high-tech planter places seed at precise spacing. Automatic sensors adjust ground pressure per planter row to sow seed at uniform depths. Software prescriptions vary the seeding rate with the guidance of global-positioning satellites. That guidance controls automatic row shut-offs on the planter to prevent overlapped planting of seed.

A machinery breakdown and overdue haircuts (even worse than in a normal spring season) will promptly remind us of the world's issues. With non-essential businesses shut down and essential agribusinesses closed to walk-in traffic, farmers forgo haircuts and order parts by phone to pick up in parking lots. Stresses will elevate if the pandemic infects any of us or the supply chain of parts, fuel, fertilizer, pesticides and other supplies or services necessary to plant crops. That includes grocery pickups to feed the planting crew.

At our farm's grain storage facility, a lit heart in the scale house window shares the universal message of togetherness and encouragement. It seems we have entered another year when we again hope that changing the calendar brings a better start.

Worm Composting is a DIY Project for all Ages

DIY projects are a great way to welcome spring. Have you ever considered Worm Composting or Vermicomposting? One pound of worms – about 500 worms – can eat between one-half and one pound of food waste per day and can double in population in a month if they have sufficient food, water, and shelter. Vermipost is mostly worm waste referred to as “castings” and compared to ordinary soil contains 5 to 11 times more plant-available nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. It is a mild organic fertilizer that is safe for your plants.

“Worm composting is a great way for you to recycle fruit and vegetable waste from your kitchen,” said Doug Gucker, University of Illinois Extension Local Foods and Small Farms Educator. “Another great thing about this type of composting is that it can be done year-round.”

The best worms for vermicomposting are: red worms, brandling worms, and European nightcrawlers. These earthworms are surface dwellers, which and vegetables – including peels – ground eggshells, coffee grounds, tea bags, and small amounts of moistened plain cereal, bread and pasta are ideal foods for worms.

Foods to avoid include meat, poultry, dairy products, oils and strongly flavored foods such as garlic and onions. In the beginning, feeding will be by trial and error.

The key is to understand the amount of food that the worms can consume in a week, and not overfeed them. Scraps that are placed in the bin should be buried in the worm bedding. This will help to reduce odor and keep from attracting insects. Varying the location of the food will also help avoid pockets of excess waste. Even though worms eat approximately half their body weight in food each day, it is easy to overwhelm them and cause problems for you.

To learn how to build an indoor vermicomposter visit <https://extension.illinois.edu/blogs/know-how-know-more>.

means they will live in the upper layers of rich, organic matter in piles of decaying litter. They do not burrow like some common earthworms found in backyards. Vermicomposting worms can also survive in temperatures ranging from 40° to 90°F but prefer between 55° and 77°F.

Master Gardeners Host e-Help Desks this Spring

Though University of Illinois Extension in-person office hours are suspended, residents can still get valuable personal gardening advice from local Extension Master Gardener volunteers this spring.

Each growing season, trained Extension volunteers field community questions through Master Gardener Help Desks in DuPage, Kane and Kendall counties. Homeowners can now get answers to their yard, landscaping and gardening question from Master Gardener volunteers via email.

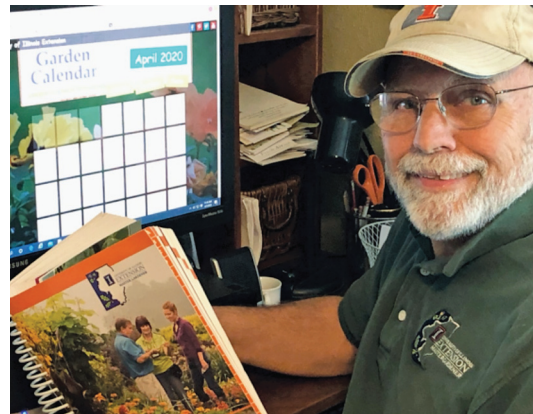

"Our Master Gardener

volunteers still want to help their neighbors grow so they are volunteering from their homes," said Richard Hentschel, Extension horticulture educator. "Master Gardeners can advise on what needs to be done in gardens and yards during each part of the growing season. Popular questions now include lawn care, starting garden transplants from seed, and early season weed control, but they also can advise on care of trees, shrubs, flowers, and vegetables."
