Teacher Quote about an AITC Visit:

"I learn so much every year! I get just as excited as the kids do when Mrs. Anderson comes!"

Madison Elementary, 1st Grade

And we're back! Back in school that is. Our educators were excited to see their teachers and students once again, even though we are still visiting virtually! We kicked off September with lessons about apples. Students learned about apple orchards, the apple tree lifecycle, apple pollination, and how farmers care for their trees! In the classroom, students were able to review what they learned by completing our apple tree seasons project. This month principals were notified about our Ag Bag program, and teachers were emailed about our Teacher Grant opportunities. Our year is off to a great start!

1. Students at Prospect Elementary learned all about apples with Marilyn.
2. The 2nd grade class at Briar Glen learned about apple lifecycles and season with Kenna.
3. We received many great classroom supplies at the Membership Appreciation Dinner.

Did you know?

Illinois is the #1 producer of horseradish in the U.S.! Collinsville, Illinois is considered the "Horseradish Capital of the World" and produces about 85% of the world's horseradish crop.

Healthy Gardens Start with Sensible Soil Testing

By Sarah Vogel,
University of Illinois
Extension Service

As the growing season wraps up and gardeners put vegetable beds to rest and clean and store tools for the winter, there is one task they may be forgetting. Testing the soil's nutrients can provide a better understanding of a garden's health and save money in the long run.

Over time, soil fertility, pH, and even soil structure can change as nutrients are depleted. Testing soils will identify missing nutrients that can then be addressed as needed. Unless there is a specific issue being remedied, soil should be tested every three to five years. Gardeners should have their soil tested every three to five years to see what nutrients are in the soil and to make any adjustments as needed. Adding fertilizer to soil that doesn't need it can harm the environment.

Fall is a great time for gardeners to test since soil temperatures are still above 50°F and the growing season is slowing down. Any added organic matter will then decompose, and nutrients will filter into the soil over winter well before planting season.

University of Illinois Extension horticulture educator Sarah Vogel says depending on the soil's natural fertility and what is being grown in it, plants can perform well for years without needing fertilizer. While fertilization can help with plant vigor and vitality, experts recommend first establishing a need and purpose for fertilizer. Understanding soil nutrient concentrations before applying fertilizer is important in a sustainable landscape.

"If fertilizer is not necessary, why waste product and time applying it?" says

Vogel. "Overfertilization can harm trees, shrubs, and even turfgrass especially during drought conditions."

Excess fertilizer can also end up in waterways and lead to aquatic life and water quality issues.

A basic soil test will measure soil pH and organic matter as well as macronutrients such as phosphorus, potassium, sulfur, calcium, and magnesium. Nutrients are most readily available to plants when the soil pH is between 6.5 and 7 and most horticultural crops do well in the range of 6 to 6.8. Many soil testing labs will also measure amounts of micronutrients such as boron, copper, iron, or manganese.

"If you are concerned about soil contaminants, such as lead in an urban site, contact the soil lab about specific instructions and additional costs," Vogel says.

Since soil samples must represent an entire yard or garden, take several core samples from evenly distributed spots and then mix them together. Remove any roots, rocks, or twigs. Gardeners can use a soil probe, sharp spade, or trowel to gather soil, taking care to remove the same amount for each sample. If comparing soils, such as a seemingly fertile soil and one that does not produce well, take and test two separate samples.

Home soil test kits are widely variable and not recommended. There are several soil testing labs in Illinois. Labs vary in pricing and services, so call before mailing soil samples.

Many labs will provide interpretation of the soil test results upon request and Illinois Extension horticulture staff can provide further guidance. Locate a local county Extension office go.illinois.edu/Extension Office.

Along with soil testing, preventative plant care can reduce the need for not only fertilizers but herbicides and pesticides as well.

Most healthy trees and shrubs do not need fertilizers once they are mature and native annuals and perennials are more suited to local soils.

Turkey Chili

This healthy turkey chili recipe is a one-pot meal game changer – and it's delicious!

PREP TIME 5 minutes • COOK TIME 35 minutes

TOTAL TIME 40 minutes • SERVINGS 10

Ingredients

2 green bell peppers
1 large diced onion
4 cloves minced garlic
1 T cooking oil
2 lbs Ground Turkey chopped
2 T cumin
3 T chili powder
1 T onion powder
1/2 T salt
2 15-oz. cans diced tomatoes
1 8 oz can tomato sauce
1 can pinto beans rinsed and drained
1 can kidney beans rinsed and drained
1 T brown sugar
1 t baking soda
Green onions sour cream, shredded cheese (optional for garnish)

Heat up the stove top and a large dutch oven then add 1 tablespoon of oil.

Sauté the chopped green pepper and onion for 2-3 minutes before adding the ground turkey.

Cook the ground turkey until just done and add in all the spices! Add in the cumin, salt, onion powder and chili powder to make as spicy (or not) as you want! Cook for an additional 1 minute, stirring occasionally.

After the turkey and spices, time to bring out the sauce.

Pour the tomato sauce and diced tomatoes and add in the brown sugar. Bring the chili to a simmer over medium heat for 15 minutes. Mmm, we're cooking now!

After 15 minutes, add your two beans of choice and a small amount of baking soda and stir until the bubbles disappear. Hold on tight, simmer for an additional 10 minutes before serving warm.

Kick up the flavor and garnish with sour cream, green onion and shredded cheese – I personally love to add jalapeños for an extra spicy kick!

Farmers know more, do more about soil health

My kids quickly mastered the abbreviations N, P and K during study sessions on the periodic table for middle school science. I couldn't explain why K stood for potassium other than phosphorous already used the letter P. Regardless, the kids memorized the elements knowing they impacted their lives as much as course grade.

Every fall, our farm samples the soil in our fields for levels of nitrogen (N), phosphorous (P), potassium (K), organic matter, pH, sulfur and various micro-nutrients. We review the collected data to identify deficiencies that need treatment. Like humans, the soil needs certain nutrients for its best health and performance. Where doctors order blood tests, farmers order soil tests for a health assessment that helps determine nutrient availability to crops and the soil's ability to support swift crop emergence and quality root development.

Armed with the know-how and technology, today's farmers can do more than ever to improve soil health. While N, P and K remain the industry standard macro-nutrients of the soil, we're now reviewing more components of the periodic table than previous generations. Micro-nutrients like boron (B), manganese (Mn), zinc (Zn) and copper (Cu) have their place in soil performance. We also assess organic matter, soil tilth and porosity and determine ways to improve them.

Minimal to no mechanical tillage reduces soil disturbance. Water management structures in fields prevent topsoil erosion. Cover crops serve as a groundcover to hold soil in place, keep the soil active, store nutrients, retain moisture and improve the soil structure between cash crops. Like routine human exercise, we're learning the soil's health improves with year-round activity.

This fall, we're using an additional tool on the combine to level and break up crop residue, making the residual plant material smaller for microorganisms to decompose. The primary goals: More organic matter and nutrients for the soil. Crushed stalks also prove gentler on tires.

After harvest, we order soil tests with site-specific coordinates using global-positioning technology. Our agronomist then writes prescriptions for machines to variably apply the rate needed across specific areas of a field, making the most efficient, productive and environmentally conscious use of elements from the periodic table.

Don't Rake Fall Leaves, Recycle Them

By Nancy Kreith,
University of Illinois Extension

Every fall, an onslaught of leaves drop relentlessly into yards leaving homeowners to rake, bag, and haul them out on the curb. But what many don't know is that those golden-hued leaves are gold in the garden.

"After raking leaves this fall, think about recycling them on your property rather than bagging them for curbside pick-up," says Nancy Kreith, University of Illinois Extension horticulture educator.

Fallen leaves are one of the most readily available forms of organic matter for home gardeners. Decomposing leaves increase organic matter in the soil, can be used as mulch for garden beds and lawns, and are a valuable addition to compost piles.

"Be sure to separate diseased leaves from the leaves you plan to recycle or compost," says Kreith.

The rate of decomposition for leaves will depend on the leaf size, tree species and moisture level. Brown leaves break down faster if they are shredded and moistened. If un-shredded leaves are applied as mulch, they tend to mat together and suffocate the soil or vegetation.

"However, having matted leaves in a vegetable or annual garden bed in the fall will help smother winter annual weeds," Kreith says. "In the spring, the leaves can be incorporated or tilled into the soil."

Another easy way to recycle leaves is by storing them in garbage bags with small holes that allow leaves to break down naturally. Wetting the leaves and having holes in direct contact with the earth, where more microbes are present, will speed up the decomposition process. The end result is referred to as leaf mold or partially decomposed leaves.

"Leaf mold can then be used as mulch or saved as a carbon source for adding to your compost pile in the summer when there is less readily available 'brown' materials," Kreith says.

Brown or dry materials are typically high in carbon and will help to balance the "green" or wet nitrogen-rich materials in a compost pile.

Leaves serve as a wonderful soil conditioner and increase organic matter in the soil, which has a variety of benefits. More organic material will increase the amount of microbial activity which includes beneficial bacteria, fungi, and other microorganisms that aid in plant growth. Organic matter also coats finer clay particles in the soil providing more air space and binds sandy soils allowing for better water retention. Ideal garden soils should test at 5% organic matter. A standard soil test will provide the percentage of organic matter in soil. For information on soil testing kits and labs, contact a University of Illinois Extension office at go.illinois.edu/ExtensionOffice.
